APPENDIX

Introduction

This document contains the report prepared by the Delegation of Costa Rica while exercising the Presidency of the Security Council of the United Nations during the month of December 1997 and has been prepared under the responsibility of Ambassador Fernando Berrocal-Soto, Permanent Representative of Costa Rica. This document should not be considered to represent the views of the Security Council nor of its Members.

During the month of December, the Council held nine formal meetings and an open debate on the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The Minister of Foreign Affairs of Costa Rica, Dr. Fernando Naranjo Villalobos presided over the formal meeting and open debate on the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina on December 19. During the Presidency of Costa Rica the Council adopted five resolutions and four presidential statements.

General Comments

The Presidency of Costa Rica endeavored to work on the basis of the principles of transparency and openness. In this regard, it followed the practice of adding, when possible, to the agenda of informal consultations published in the daily journal of the United Nations the issues to be taken up under the item of other matters. At the same time, it briefed the Delegations Members of the Organizations immediately after consultations of the Council had taken place. The President gave statements to the press after the informal consultations of the whole regarding the items taken up, as advised by the Members of the Security Council.

The Presidency of Costa Rica gave particular attention to the issue of "working methods of the Security Council" and included on agenda for December the holding of informal consultations of the whole on this matter. During that meeting, the elected members of the Security Council presented for the consideration of the Council a "position paper on the working methods of the Security Council" annexed to a letter, dated 22 of December 1997, which contains a series of comments and proposals for the democratization and improvement of the methods of work and decision making in this principal organ of the United Nations.

It is the opinion of the Delegation of Costa Rica that this issue constitutes a key element in for the reform of the Security Council, which is being discussed in the Open-Ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council, of the General Assembly. Costa Rica considers that the reform of the methods of work of the Security Council and approval of its definitive rules of procedure constitutes a most important element of the process of reform of the Security Council. In this regard, the position paper prepared by the elected members of the Council, which is attached to this document, is of extreme importance.

Like in the previous months, African issues dominated the agenda of the Council. Some other issues of especial importance like the situation in Iraq, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Croatia, Cyprus, Afghanistan and Tajikistan were also subject of discussions.

1-Working Methods of the Security Council

On December 23, members of the Security Council met in informal consultations of the whole on the working methods of the Security Council and discussed the position paper prepared by ten of its member on that issue, which was annexed to a letter addressed to the President of the Security Council dated 22 December 1997. Some members stressed the fact the they were presenting only preliminary views.

Some members questioned the convenience of discussing this issue when it was being discussed both by the Open-Ended Working Group on the Reform of the Security Council and by the Charter Committee. They argued that it might be prudent to wait for a conclusion of the discussions that were being held at those other organs. Other members pointed out that the Security Council is the master of its own procedure and that, in consequence, it has the right and the obligation to consider any possible improvements to its methods of work.

Some of the authors of the proposal expressed that it was directed to improve the efficiency of the decision-making procedures of the Security Council and to increase the transparency and democracy in its action. It was mentioned that an improvement in the methods of work could increase the legitimacy and the leadership of the Security Council action before the International Community. Those members further explained that there are loopholes in the current provisional rules of procedure and that it is necessary to respect fully both the letter and the spirit of the provisions of the Charter regarding the procedure of the Security Council. They also stressed the need to adopt definitive rules of procedure for the Security Council.

Some members recognized the importance of ensuring the proper balance between the goal of transparency and the need for efficiency in the working of the Security Council. In this regard, some members stressed that the delicate nature of the issues regarding international peace and security and the crisis circumstances that usually surround the items in the agenda of the Security Council require a particular degree of confidentiality and efficiency.

Some members also mentioned that some of the proposals included in the position paper were already in practice, while much of the success of the Security Council during the last years was due to the consensus procedure usually used according to which agreements are made confidentially instead of having procedural disputes in formal meetings. Some members insisted that a realistic approach must be used in order to reform the working methods of the Security Council and that any reform of those procedures requires the agreement of all members.

Several members presented diverging views regarding the modalities for the participation of States non members of the Security Council and of Non Governmental Organizations in its work. It was decided that the Informal Working Group of the Security Council concerning the Council's Documentation and Other Procedural Questions would continue to consider these issues.

2-AFRICA

Democratic Republic of the Congo

On December 3, Assistant Secretary General Fall briefed Council Members on the status of the investigative team. After overcoming the difficulties with the authorities in Kinshasa, the Secretary-General sent a letter to President Kabila expressing to him gratitude for receiving the team and for allowing them to perform their respective mandate. Regarding the current situation in the DRC, Mr. Fall added the Government of President Kabila had established a liaison committee to work with the investigative team and that a Conference of the Friends of the DRC was scheduled to take place in Brussels on the 4 of December. This Conference was going to discuss further aid in the economic and social fields. The United Nations was going to be represented by the UNDP.

He reminded the members that the Council, in resolution 955(1994) which established the Tribunal, decides to consider increasing the number of judges and Trial Chambers if it becomes necessary. He added that, to that date, 23 persons had been indicted in Arusha and that, due to the cooperation of several states, a number high ranking officials had been captured and were awaiting trial.

Mr. Kama referred to his request for the creation of a new chamber and for hiring more personnel. He also mentioned the possibility of hiring ad-hoc judges, which that could be less expensive. At the time, two trials were taking place in the permanent chamber, and a third one was being held the provisional chamber. A second permanent chamber is scheduled to be constructed this year in order to hear three trials at the same time.

Position paper on working methods of the Security Council

1. The Security Council should proceed to finalize its provisional rules of procedure, including the new methods of work and the new practices which have been agreed upon and are being implemented, without prejudice to further improvement of the working methods of the Council and their flexible application.
2. Open public meetings should be held at any stage of the consideration of a subject, in lieu of informal consultations of the whole. Whenever necessary, the Council could meet in private formal sessions. Written records should be ensured for formal sessions of the Council, public or private. Informal consultations of the whole could be held whenever necessary but not as the main way for the Council to conduct its business. Orientation debates previously announced and with the participation of States not members of the Council should be held prior to the Council's taking a decision on a particular matter.
3. The Security Council should apply strictly the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Council's of procedure, particularly those related to ensuring that any Member of the United Nations and any State which is not a member of the United Nations as well as members of the Secretariat or any other person may participate or be invited to participate, as appropriate, in the discussion of any item before the Council and be given adequate opportunity to address the Council in an appropriate forum.
4. The Security Council should consider allowing States non-members of the Council to make statements at the meetings in which a statement is made by the President on behalf of members of the Council.
5. Meetings held under the Arria formula are designed to allow members of the Council to obtain information related to issues under consideration from any source, not least of a non-governmental nature. "Arria" meetings are not the privileged format for the Council to meet with representatives of States; formal meetings of the Council, according to the Charter and the existing provisional rules, are. By virtue of their informal character, "Arria" meetings do not require formal acquiescence by all members of the Council. However, all Security Council members should be encouraged to participate.
6. Briefings by the Secretary-General or any United Nations official acting on his behalf should, as appropriate, be made at a formal meeting of the Security Council in public or private session in accordance with rule 39 of the Council's provisional rules of procedure. Written records of such briefings should therefore be ensured.
7. Before the Security Council imposes sanctions on any member State or reviews sanctions imposed on any State, a formal meeting of the Council should be held as a general rule where opportunity should be given to the State or States concerned or the State under sanctions as well as other neighbouring and interested States to present their views in accordance with Articles 31 and 32 of the Charter at an appropriate time.

8. Briefings by the President of the Security Council to the general membership should be substantive and conducted promptly after each informal consultation of the whole, including information on draft resolutions and/or presidential statements under consideration at such consultations. Members of the Security Council should be encouraged to follow a transparent approach with other States not members of the Security Council concerning the work of the Council with a view to benefiting from their views on subject matters under consideration.
9. The Sanctions Committees should further enhance transparency in their work through publishing the summary records for each meeting of the committees in a timely manner.
10. Consultations with troop-contributing countries should ensure more active participation of members of the Council as well as troop-contributing States through:
 - (a) The participation of potential troop contributors and other substantial contributors in the consultations in the preparatory phase of each operation as well as when the mandates of the operations are extended or changed;
 - (b) The preparation of a summary of the troop contributor consultations to be made available to all Member States; and
 - (c) The holding of presidential briefings for the general membership on the results of troop contributors' meetings.
11. Agenda items of formal Council meetings and informal consultations of the whole published in the Journal should be more specific.
12. The Council should make a tentative forecast of its programme of work more available to the general membership, as stated in the note by the President in his note dated 27 July 1993, preferably as a document of the Security Council, and include the provisional monthly programme of work of the Security Council. In this regard, the Council should consider the programme of work for the month in a formal session.
13. An effective mechanism should be established to alert States non-members of the Council of emergency, previously unscheduled and/or weekend meetings of the Security Council. The Secretariat should undertake the necessary measures to this end.
14. The descriptive part of the annual report of the Council should include a factual summary of the discussions at the consultations of the whole on all issues considered by the Council, as well as a summary of the deliberations of the Sanctions Committees. Information regarding the substantive work of the subsidiary organs of the Council, including the Sanctions Committees, should be included in the annex to the annual report.

15. The Security Council should consider implementing the provisions of Article 24, paragraph 3, 22 December 1997, of the Charter by presenting special reports, when necessary, to the General Assembly. The Security Council should identify such necessary cases taking into account all relevant factors.
