Statement made by the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Somalia to the United Nations at the 62nd formal meeting of the Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict

Mr. Chair, distinguished members of the Security Council, ladies and gentlemen,

At the outset, I would like to congratulate you, Mr. Chair, on assuming the chairmanship of the Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict, and we wish you every success in your work. I would like to take this opportunity to commend the current Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, Leila Zerrougui, and all who paved the way to realizing this mandate over the past two decades.

The Federal Government of Somalia, in the past four years, has made significant advances in Somali children's rights. The historic milestone was the President signing the Convention on the Rights of the Child in January 2015. Since the signing of the Convention, the number of children in the army has dramatically declined. This momentous breakthrough provides the basis for further institutional building and government capacity development, given the requisite framework to protect children's rights, including upgrading legislation and policy.

Another milestone was signing the standard operating procedures on reception and handover of children from armed groups, as well as our work with the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) to implement the global campaign "Children, not soldiers" and the action plans signed by the Government in 2012, one on ending the recruitment/use of children and the other on ending the killing and maiming of children. The Prosecutor's office has conducted enquiries into incidents of grave child rights violations that were reported in different areas of Somalia. Moreover, this office brought suspects to Mogadishu to stand trial and worked with relevant ministries to fly out victims for treatment. The Somali Federal Government is committed to further improving monitoring and establishing measures to prevent these grave violations against our children.

The Somali Government continued its efforts for the release and reintegration of children recruited by armed forces and groups. This is done through the establishment of the Serendi rehabilitation centre for disengaged fighters of armed groups. The purpose of this centre is to rehabilitate adults and children formerly associated with armed groups before reintegrating them into society. The reintegration interventions include the opportunity for the former fighters to go back to enjoy (in)formal education, vocational and livelihoods skills training, psychosocial guidance, tracing and family reunification and placement into foster care families. In order to improve reintegration interventions further, we will devote particular attention to ensuring that families are able to survive as we provide them with basic services such as health care and housing.

We have also improved the procedures and policies of the centre, making it more transparent and open to independent monitoring. Today, 64 disengaged child fighters have been transferred to child-appropriate facilities better equipped for their specific needs. In that regard, we thank our partners and we urge them to ensure that disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes continue to receive the resources necessary to operate effectively.

The Ministry of Education partnered with UNICEF to ensure children and youth groups' participation in child protection activities by establishing 500 child rights clubs, promoting safe and protective learning environments in schools across Somalia. Community-based child protection mechanisms were effective in preventing and responding to threats to children's well-being, with community-based child protection implemented in 28 districts. The programme aims to empower communities to take on the protection of child rights and violations, while taking action to prevent recurrences and to provide support to children. Nonetheless, gaps remain in understanding the underlying motivations of children to engage voluntarily in armed conflict. This needs more in-depth research in order to prevent and respond to child recruitment.

The Federal Government of Somalia has achieved many goals in the past four years when it comes to protecting our children in armed conflict, but there is always more room for improvement. We condemn and we are committed to investigating the serious incidents stated in the report of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, including arrests, deaths and shelling of hospitals and schools in counter-terrorism operations. In cooperation with our international partners, we have made overall progress in improving Somali children's access to justice, social services and the establishment of a minimum package regarding a functional child protection system. Challenges still remain in age verification owing to the absence of established birth registration systems.

The Somali Government improved Somali National Army conduct by collaborating with the United Nations, the European Union training mission and the African Union Mission in Somalia (AMISOM), which provided training on child protection to more than 8,000 Somali National Army soldiers. We will continue to monitor that all Somali security forces are upholding and advancing their national and international obligation in terms of human rights. As the Somali Government plans to reach the 2020 "one person, one vote" agenda, rebuilding our national security forces will be crucial to protect our people and defeat the international terrorist organization Al-Shabaab, as well as to pave the way for AMISOM drawdown in 2018 and its eventual exit. Therefore, we ask our international partners to continue to support our national security forces and to consider delisting the forces from the Secretary-General's future report.

It is a new dawn for Somalia with the election of the President-elect, Mohamed Abdullahi Farmajo. We are committed to assuming our primary responsibility in the protection of the children within our borders. From that perspective, we recognize and work on durably strengthening our institutional capacities in terms of the legislative, judicial and executive branches. The Somali Government will scale up its efforts to protect the most vulnerable — the youngest among us — and, with them, our future. Council members may rest assured that Somalia will continue furthering that endeavour.
